

Windows 10 has a Night Light mode that can automatically dim the screen at night time and prepare you for bed and can help you use your computer if you have a headache. Simply click on your notification tab next to your clock on the bottom right and turn on Night Light

You can middle click a tab on Firefox or Chrome to close it without having to move your cursor to the tiny "x" button

Use Ctrl+G to search any webpage for a specific word or phrase instead of having to read through an entire page just to find the one thing you need.

You can highlight anything on a website using most browsers and right click to search that text or image without having to type it in a new window
